

My last run as supervisor was a lot of training. From January - April 2013, had all the new Crew Trainers coming in. A ton of management had already left/moved around. Our retreat attempted to prepare/avoid what happened summer of 2012... Yet to see the results. These classes were definitely a more mature set (older, but not like 30's). The "interns" were really cool... some a little too arrogant. <redacted> Training/certs/ everything was fun, but tiring! I got to teach quite a bit (especially F/D amazing-ness) and STS briefings. The newbies + everyone else always mentioned how "amazing" they were... but meh. I was just excited to teach what I love, including the new AA stuff. There were a few newbies who were extra cool... some I took interest in. <Idalia> was definitely one of them. I could not tell if she had any interest, but I felt like it. Of course, other things were happening w/ me @ that time... hence, I never gathered myself to ask her out. <redacted> ... <redacted> was another, but I didn't feel enough to pursue. I sort of did... but not really. And I was always wondering if <redacted> was single. I joined <redacted> + museum sim staff (first class was awesome... I hired a few!) bowling one night and she was there! She seemed pretty happy to see me, but she was with some dude there. He seemed OK, but I'm still not sure if they were dating. <redacted> I visited the other day. She is still so pretty + kind. Dang!