

Still not sure if I was ready to date again when we got close last fall. Really like her. She's beautiful, caring, good-hearted, and has some good goals. She's a lot like me in terms of beliefs/family/wanting to be happy w/ someone. She definitely admits not being book smart. Naturally, I usually would be more (technically) to most people I may be interested in... actually, no. Joking, smart is more than that. Way more. She is a smart, strong girl. I guess I just also want in a girl one who is going through college, too. Hard to break that. Just because one isn't going to college doesn't mean they have no aspirations in life! I'm stupid! But like I said earlier, I'll usually be the one in a relationship explaining rockets/aircraft (because I do not want to date an engineer. Anything else, first). But not because I'm smarter, but because I love it! I'm still pretty smart, though. Definitely got my A game @ work today. Flight test => Going excellent! Further refinement on the way, but we are really pushing the envelope now! And I want to help <Chantal> get her photography stuff moving a little. I just don't want to turn into another rebound/only because someone is lonely. Been through that already...